

STANDARDS FOR APPRENTICES

1. The ability to meet the expected standards of employment in the trades that is generally referred to in the industry as the “worth ethic”.
2. A thorough knowledge of and commitment to the physical, mental, and emotional demands of the occupation.
3. The physical ability and strength necessary to the particular trade.
4. The academic requirements for apprenticeship and the ability to maintain and acceptable level of performance in apprenticeship academics and work site learning situations.
5. The ability to function successfully within the context of employer and co-worker expectations and the required work processes.
6. The maintenance of personal living habits that support success in the work environment.
7. The motivation to achieve clearly defined personal and work related goals.
8. The thinking and problem solving skills necessary to efficient and effective work and academic progress.